SEN. POTTER REPORTS

From Washington

TOOLING UP for the mighty Jupiter intermediate range ballistic missile is getting into high gear at the Chrysler Warren plant outside Detroit. Regular production checks await 500 men and women now being hired and everything points to doubling of the present work force by the end of the year. That would bring it close to 10,000 workers at Warren. Unusually high the most cheerful development in a month of Sundays, the new jobs come as a result of the recently announced Army award of a $52,000,000 missile contract.

Of course, this merely dents Michigan's jobless list, but it offers enormous encouragement to those of us who need the Pentagon ceaselessly to place defense contracts where they are needed most—in Michigan's labor surplus centers. Tooling-up is sure to be followed by hefty production orders. I'm confident that the effects of this first huge Jupiter contract will spill out through southern Michigan to smaller businesses who will garner a share of the subcontracts.

The President has asked Congress for $1.2 billion in emergency defense funds and $40 billion in the new budget, much of it for stepping up missile work. What has been labeled as "Potter's Push on the Pentagon" will be continued in an effort to get this money into Michigan in the form of defense contracts and new jobs.

PAY TV hearings open tomorrow and I predict a verbal slugfest. Can Mr. and Mrs. America lounge in front of the family television set to be informed and entertained free of charge? Or must they drop a coin in the slot to receive certain programs?

I oppose any form of pay TV. A man buys a television set expecting that his investment will right there, with the exception, perhaps, of a few service charges.

Pay TV is like buying a refrigerator and having to drop money in the slot before you can open the door and get something to eat.

I expect to appear before the House Commerce Committee to point out my reasons for opposing these schemes. Today we have 40 million households in the nation and the investment of American citizens in our free system of television adds up to $17 billion. That money has enabled networks and local stations to build their news and public events coverage to the point where the American people are among the best-informed in the world. It has all been free of charge, built by free enterprise. Let's keep it that way.

LAST WEEK'S CARAVAN of Michigan visitors brought U. S. Attorney Wendell Miles of Grand Rapids and Mr. Henry Wolfenden, distinguished Detroit lawyer, to my office. Both gentlemen asked me what I consider the most urgent tasks facing Congress in the coming session. First and foremost, I replied, come national security. I believe any strengthening of our defenses should give special emphasis to missiles. Second, but equally important, we must increase opportunities for scientific training. Third, American economic strength must be guarded by wise allocation of funds for these costly programs. I was gratified to note, after President Eisenhower delivered his State of the Union address, that his list of eight priorities for "total peace" included the three objectives I had pointed out.

"WATERVLIET," Dutch for "flowing water," was settled "way back" in the early 1830's and named for the rapids once existing in the Paw Paw River.

Best wishes, Charles E. Potter, United States Senator.

Joint Job Of Selling Michigan
Government, Industry Begin

Laudable Harmony: Government and industry are starting a joint campaign to sell Michigan to the world and each other.

It is part of a program to look on the other side of the state's economic climate, and the flight of business and industry to other states because of taxes and labor costs.

Dan Gerber, president of Gerber's Baby Products at Fremont and chairman of the Michigan Economic Development Commission, said that the theme of the campaign is "Michigan Means Business."

"The need is for Michigan people to co-operate in solving their problems and to co-operate in selling their state," he said.

About 100 of the state's leading businessmen and industrialists have agreed to take part in a program as "Industrial Ambassadors" to carry the word of Michigan's attractions on their travels around the nation.

The campaign broadsides do not get into the controversy over taxes and labor costs which has raged over the past two years.

The in-state political impact of this battle between Republicans, who claim Williams' tax ideas are driving business and industry elsewhere, and Democrats who deny everything, is still unknown.

It can be gauged after the 1958 campaign when Democrats seek to extend their almost blanket control of state elective offices.

Gerber said 20 new industries located in Michigan in 1957.

If the selling campaign is successful, the GOP charge will lose some of its punch when the votes are counted next November.

The significance of the 1958 election is not lost by either party. Democrats feel it is their last chance under Williams to take full control of state government. Republicans know they must start a comeback soon, or maybe never.

Democrats are aiming for a new foothold in the legislature, still dominated by Republicans.

In the Jan. 4 inauguration, Democrats formally took over five seats on the Michigan Supreme Court bench, control of the state board of agriculture which governs Michigan State University and gained a 4 to 4 split on the University of Michigan Board of Regents.

All top elective state officials are Democratic. Republicans hope to save their last top post with U. S. Senator Potter next fall.

Financial Crises have a way of occurring every year for state governments.

The 1958 crisis brought a turnabout by Williams, who in other years has preached the expanding needs of a growing state and demanded more money with a tax on corporate incomes.

Republicans held the line on the budget and have held off on further taxes whenever possible.

Williams took an economy tack this year. Opponents relate this effort for economy to the fall election.

"... We Need 'em Fast!"

THE SCENE IS the traffic department of any of our manufacturing plants in Michigan. The time is any day of the week. The traffic manager is talking to a supplier in another state about some part production.

"Send 'em by truck," he says, as he prepares to need 'em fast!"

He knows from experience that motor transport is the link between shipping and receiving. He knows that in fact, he and thousands of his fellow Michigan men have been the men most responsible for the speed of motor transport. Once they experienced the speed of trucks, there was no satisfying them with less — and today their companies could not operate without truck transport!

That's something for every wage earner in Michigan about.

Big Money Guessing Game

Did you ever hear of an "annual $70,000,000,000 guessing game?" Alfred Steinberg writes about it, in the January issue of The Reader's Digest. This incredibly expensive guessing game, he shows, is implicit in the present method of making each year's federal budget.

The extent of the problem has been succinctly stated by no less an authority than former President Herbert Hoover: "Under present procedures there is no effective control over expenditures either by Congress or the executive." The method looks good—on the surface. The President estimates and requests the money he thinks needed to run the government, and then Congress decides whether or not his ideas are correct and acts accordingly. But the truth is, according to Mr. Steinberg, that "... an entrenched bureaucracy controls the budget; the President and Congress have become the tail on this bureaucracy's kite."

The reasons for this sad state of affairs are several. For one thing, "... most department budgets are prepared from the bottom up." Legions of officials have a hand in preparing the estimates, and they want all the money, projects, and importance they can get. Budget preparation begins 18 months before the next budget period, and often proves to be outdated and "... about as realistic as Caesar's ghost." The Bureau of the Budget, which has the duty of checking on all budgets, is woefully understaffed, in the light of the magnitude of the task, and can't make thorough analyses of needs. Mr. Steinberg cites the case of an agency which had been set up to report on a 1917 grain-elevator explosion in Baltimore. It was still operating 30 years later, when Budget Bureau inspectors caught up with it. Then, agencies commonly spend unneeded funds rather than return them to the Treasury—on the grounds that they did return them their next requests for money might be cut.

The Congressional appropriations committees, in the view of Senator McClellan, "... are practically helpless" when it comes to dealing with budgets. They have few employees for budget work. Appropriation requests are split into many separate bills and the budget as a whole is not studied. According to Mr. Steinberg, a subcommittee once raced through a $3,200,000,000 request for the Atomic Energy Commission in a single afternoon. And the worst feature of all, he says, is that "... some 65 percent of government spending is beyond the reach of Congress." It is found in fixed charges, pensions, etc.

Mr. Steinberg feels that three steps should initially be taken to bring order out of this chaos. First, the president should be authorized to use the "item" veto; that is, he could veto individual items in an appropriation bill, while retaining other items. At present he must approve or disapprove the entire bill, without exception.

Second, what is known as "No-Year" appropriations should be eliminated. These are appropriations made without time limitations. Their elimination would force each agency to retail the goods and services it wants for the next year only.

Third, the staffs of the Bureau of the Budget and the Congressional appropriations committees should be enlarged and strengthened.

To quote Mr. Steinberg once more: "Until we put our budget-making apparatus on a sounder basis, the present uneconomic shambles will continue."

Interesting Events In Grayling 23 Years Ago

INTERESTING ITEMS OF NEWS GATHERED FROM THE FILES OF THE AVALANCHE OF 23 YEARS AGO

January 24, 1935
Grayling Winter park is in top notch condition and everything is in readiness for the tenth annual winter carnival, and as we go to press, weather conditions are ideal. Jesse Schoonover, working with the local committee, was able to secure the attendance of the Mobile Gas loud speaker auto. That will mean plenty of music for the big street parade and for the skaters at the park. Besides, this will be used for broadcasting announcements of the events as they are about to take place. In this manner visitors may know at all times just what to expect. This will be especially valuable in announcing the ski jumping events from the big ski jump on the hill, also the skating and hockey events and exhibitions.

Grayling now boasts of a Kiwanis Club, and it's a proud achievement for our home town. Thirty business and professional men banded together for the common good of their home community. For several weeks past Dr. C. G. Clippert had taken the lead in an effort to obtain such an organization here. Some of our business and professional men were approached upon the matter and all seemed to be for it. Accordingly last week Friday night M. King Gillett, Kiwanis International, came to Grayling to hold the first organization meeting. There was great enthusiasm for the movement and thirty men signed the application blanks and paid their first assessment of dues. Mr. Gillett gave a resume of the workings of the club. Frank Shipp, president of the Kiwanis club of Gaylord, was present and told how the Kiwanis club was going strong in that city. The following officers were elected: President, Dr. C. G. Clippert; vice president, T. P. Peterson; secretary, A. J. Joseph; treasurer, C. W. Olsen. Directors are Fred R. Welsh, O. P. Schumann, Dr. C. H. Keyport, Emil Giegling, Neil Corwin, Rev. J. L. Culligan and John Bruun. It was decided to hold the regular meetings of the club at Shoppensons Inn at 12:05 P. M. each Wednesday. President Clippert appointed the following standing committee: chairman: C. W. Olsen; Kiwanis education, Gerald Ford; music, program and publicity, O. P. Schumann; agriculture and business standards, Frank A. Barnett; vocational guidance, boys and girls work, Wilford Cornell; club meetings, Dr. C. R. Keyport.

Miss Cora Lewis, the unanimous choice of the judges, is the Winter Sports Carnival Queen for 1935. Her election was consummated at the Radio Theatre Sunday afternoon, when she appeared among the seven possible contestants. The judges were Miss Helen Bradley, and Mrs. W. F. Hyatt, Jr., staff reporter for the Bay City Daily Times; Ben Wright, publicity director of the E. M. T. A.; Dr. Ernest Kellerman of Kalkaska, and M. King Gillett of the Kiwanis International. The seven contestants were elected by popular vote, they having the largest number of votes among the 19 who were nominated. The six other young ladies were Lela Gierke, Helen May, Dorothy Robinson, Florence Kellogg, Jenni Lee Raymond and June Horner. They will comprise the queen's court and assume active parts in the carnival activities. Miss Lewis is the daughter of S. J. Lewis, commissioner of schools of Oshtemo County. For the past two years she has been a teacher in Grayling school, and is a member of the Grayling Woman's Club.

Paige Fenton of Bay City will be the guest of Brad Jarmin during the winter carnival.

Dan Babbitt and family spent Sunday in Roscommon visiting at the Frank Barber home.

Mrs. Leo Jorgenson left Tuesday morning for Adrian for a short visit. She accompanied Mrs. Adolph Peterson.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Schreiber and Frank Burnett left for Lansing yesterday to attend a meeting of superintendents of the poor.

Guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Welsh during the carnival will be Mr. and Mrs. William Dryer and children, Betty Anne and William, Jr., of Bay City.

Carl P. Mickelson of Mason came yesterday to spend a few days here.

Rasmus Rasmussen, who has been in Flint receiving treatment for a sore foot and visiting his daughter, Mrs. E. W. Creque, Jr., will return home the end of this week.

Dr. J. F. Cook will have as his guests for the carnival Mr. and Mrs. William Schweinberg of Bay City, Dr. and Mrs. Johnson of St. Joseph, and Lawrence Muscott of Alma.

In the down river section there are several on the sick list. Miss Harriet Wakeley is ill at her home with pneumonia and her brother, Francis, sick with the flu. They are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wakeley. Mrs. Arthur E. Wakeley and Mrs. John Knecht are also ill at this writing.

The Graduate Girls Sewing club met at the home of Waldemar Jensen, with Miss Martha Sorenson as hostess Tuesday evening. A good laugh and lunch were served to all. Misses Elma Mae, Lois, and Evelyn Sorenson, Murial DeLaMater, Dorothy Roberts, and Mrs. Floyd SanCarlier welcomed as new members to their club Misses Madonna Cariveau, Mildred Hanson and Mrs. William Foley.

LINE IN DRESS HOME EC. TOPIC

An attractive appearance means bringing out the best characteristics of one's own personal coloring, personality and figure.

To achieve this, it is necessary to know how to use good design in the costume and to adapt it to one's own characteristics.

As the Home Economics Extension groups of Crawford County are interested in learning to dress well they have selected the lesson, "Line in Dress" as one of the topics to study this year.

This lesson will be taught by Miss Bernetta Kahabka Clothing Specialist from Michigan State University.

Leaders of the Home Economics Extension groups will meet February 12th, 1958 in the County room.

Success in Sentiment

By Jim Bourrie

"TUBERS IN TECHNI-COLOR"

A northerner asked a southern farmer, "You raise hogs exclusively. Do they pay better than corn or potatoes?"

"Wal, no," came the slow reply. "But you see, stranger, hogs don't need no hoeing."

Even so, hog raising is a minor part of southern farm income. Share-croppers of Louisiana raised cotton until a quiet secessionist went to work.

In 1929, Dr. Julian Miller bought the best varieties of Puerto Rican Sweet Potatoes. He planted, grew, dug and replanted. He watched, counted, cut and examined these daily in an effort to increase flowering so he could cross-pollinate. After many years, Dr. Miller found the secret. He grew yams that resisted the wilt and soil rot of the old sweet potatoes.

These red-gold tubers put a little green into the pockets of share-croppers. By 1949, many had netted $15,000.00 per year. Now over 150 dehydrator plants make livestock feed and 50 canneries produce whole canned yams because somebody cared.

You'll be reading advertisements about the "Louisiana Yam Supper." We suggest you try these "tubers in technicolor." Treat the family to ham and yams. We are featuring both at our store. Tell the family about the persistent professor who gave us a better food at a lower price - and increased the standard of living for many people.

"Beyond a shadow of a Doubt" is next week's story. Same time... same place.

Steadily increasing enrollment has made a division necessary in the second grade taught by Ronald Larson. Mrs. James Post has been named as the new teacher in that class. Marcia Sorenson is the new president of the Light Brigade where offices change every quarter. Her fellow officers are vice president, Kitty Lee Funk; recording secretary, Audrey Walmsley; attendance secretary, Beverly Johnson; and treasurer, Patsy McEvers. M. this coming Sunday when some 250 Explorer Scouts and Girl Scouts from the Lansing area take time out from skiing, skating, etc., to go to church. Rev. R. C. Puffer will conduct the service, and will be assisted by the Youth Choir under the direction of Mr. Charles Holcamp.

The Rev. Harold Salomon, of Cheboygan, former pastor of the local Michelson Memorial Church, will preach the sermon on Sunday, January 26, at the 11 o'clock service. Rev. R. C. Puffer will be in the Gaylord pulpit the same morning.

Friday evening a group from the church drove to Hillman for a Wesley Foundation capital funds drive meeting. Those attending were Rev. Puffer, T. E. Peterson, Harvey Rowland, Charles Holcamp and Russell Carlson.

Mrs. R. C. Puffer, Mrs. Gene Cornwall and son, David, recently motored to Cadillac, bringing home with them a Shetland pony 7 months old, for David. He is now at the Puffer farm.

38% Of Local Deaths Due To Heart Disease

(Special to the Avalanche)

New York, Jan. 13. — New government figures show that the principal cause of death in the United States, show that heart disease, man's greatest enemy, is responsible for 38.1 percent of all deaths among residents of Crawford County.

This proportion is high, above the average reported for the United States as a whole, where the rate is 33.8 percent, and above that for the State of Michigan, 33.0 percent.

The heart disease problem is brought to the fore at this time because of the approach of February, designated National Heart Month. About 850,000 people in the United States will die this year from the disease, estimates the American Heart Association. That is more than 2,000 a day. In other causes combined, including cancer, accidents and all other diseases.

It is almost three times as many as the fatalities suffered by our armed forces in all four years of World War II.

Among residents of Crawford County, the latest official figures, issued recently by the U. S. Public Health Service for 1935, show a total of 41 deaths, of which 23 are attributed to diseases of the heart.

The chief culprit was coronary heart disease, which was responsible for 11 of them.

During the past 30 years, the risk of dying before the age of 24 from one of the diseases of the heart and blood vessels has been reduced by 70 percent, states the American Heart Association. In the 25-44 year bracket, the risk has been cut down by 35 percent. The gains are the result of new knowledge developed through medical research.

Curiously it has been found that heart disease rates are noticeably higher for the widowed, the single and the divorced than for the married. The more favorable environment of the married appears to be a factor.

The part of the country in which you live also seems to play a part. The heart rate is found to be lowest in the Mountain States and highest in the North Eastern States.

Michigan timber wolves, found only in the upper peninsula, face extinction as their numbers continue to decline. Latest evidence of this decrease is indicated by 1937 bounty records which show hunters and trappers killed only five wolves during the first 11 months of the year, compared with 28 during the same period in 1936.

The timber wolf, outstanding symbol of the wilderness, may soon disappear from Michigan.

As civilization makes heavier inroads into once remote areas of the state, the plight of wolves grows worse. These big grey animals are not at home with man and continue to retreat as well range becomes more limited.

At present, Michigan's wolf population probably numbers fewer than 100 animals—limited to wilder sections of the upper peninsula.

Even in dwindling numbers, the wolf carries a price on his head, and hunters and trappers reduce the remaining population each year. A state bounty of $15 per male and $20 per female is paid for wolf carcasses.

Bounty records give an indication of the decline in the wolf population. The animal kill of wolves has ranged from 20 to 28 in recent years, but this figure dropped to only five during 1937.

Several sportsmen's organizations have recommended that wolves be removed from the bounty list in an effort to save this vanishing species. The Michigan Bear Hunters Association, for example, recently urged that the wolf bounty be discontinued and "the species be given limited or full protection."
